A. Who is This Guide for?

This Guide provides information to relative caregivers and parents when it becomes necessary for a relative caregiver to care for a D.C. child.

A relative caregiver is someone related to a child (by blood, marriage, or adoption) or a close family friend who is taking care of a child when the child’s parents cannot care for him or her. Examples of relative caregivers are grandparents, great-grandparents, aunts, uncles, great-aunts, great-uncles, and godparents.

A D.C. child is a child whose “home state” is D.C. D.C. will generally be the home state of a child if he or she has lived in D.C. for at least six months. (See Section II.C.2. of this Guide for more definitions of “home state”).

The information in the Guide will be most helpful to relative caregivers who live in D.C. and are caring for a D.C. child. It may still be helpful to:

► Relative caregivers who live in D.C. and are caring for a child who came from another state; or ► Relative caregivers who do not live in D.C. and are caring for a child who came from D.C.

(It may be complicated to figure out what state law and financial benefits apply in these situations. You can ask for help from the Family Court Self-Help Center located on the JM level of the D.C. Superior Court or contact a local legal services organization or family law attorney for more information (see Appendix C)).
B. What Information Does This Guide Provide?

This Guide provides information about the legal options a relative caregiver and parent should consider when it becomes necessary for a relative caregiver to help care for a child during difficult times. It also explains the financial resources that may be available for each option. The information in this Guide is current as of January 1, 2020.

The pros and cons of each option are discussed to help figure out the best choice. It might be hard to decide which option is best. This Guide provides information about where to get help with this decision. Many organizations are available to help.

This Guide generally focuses on options to consider that can be changed later if circumstances change. It does not address the permanent option of adoption. Information on adoption can be obtained from CFSA, a local legal services organization, or a family lawyer (see Appendices B and C for contact information).

C. What are Some Examples of a Relative Caregiver Caring for a D.C. Child?

Below are some situations when a relative caregiver may need to care for a D.C. child:

► Dana gave birth to Carla while she was still in high school. Dana and her mother, Gwendolyn, agree that it would be better if they share responsibility for taking care of Carla until Dana graduates from high school and can find a job. Gwendolyn is a relative caregiver to Carla.
Jerome has been the primary caregiver for his two-year-old son Isaiah. Isaiah's mother comes by to see him when she can, but she is homeless and cannot care for Isaiah. Jerome was recently arrested and is now in D.C. Jail. Jerome asks his mother, Jada, to take care of Isaiah while he is in jail. Jada is a relative caregiver to Isaiah.

Louise has kidney disease and is on the waiting list for a kidney transplant. If she does not get the transplant soon, her doctors say she will become very sick and only have a few months to live. Louise asks her sister, Sherry, to care for her four-year-old daughter, Kendal, if she does not get the transplant. In that case, Sherry would become a relative caregiver to Kendal.

Camille has been the primary caregiver for her six-year-old son Raymond. The D.C. Child and Family Services Agency (“CFSA”) has become involved because Camille has a substance use problem that resulted in her not being able to properly care for Raymond. CFSA, Camille, and Camille’s mother, Linda, have agreed that Linda will care for Raymond while Camille goes to rehab. Linda is a relative caregiver to Raymond.

Maria is from El Salvador and has Temporary Protected Status (TPS). Her 10-year-old son, Christopher, was born here and is a United States citizen. She is worried that her TPS may be revoked and wants to make sure her son can stay in this country if she is ever deported. Maria asks her brother, Angelo, who is a green card holder to care for Christopher if she is deported. Angelo would become a relative caregiver for Christopher if Maria is deported.
A. Informal Custody

1. What is Informal Custody?
Informal custody happens when a relative caregiver cares for a child with no court order or formal legal agreement between the relative caregiver and the parent(s).

2. Who Can Get Informal Custody?
Anyone can get informal custody—you must simply be willing to care for a child when his or her parent(s) cannot.

3. How to Get Informal Custody?
There is no specific process for getting informal custody, and it can happen in a number of ways. Some examples include a parent asking a relative to take the child for a period of time while he or she is unable to provide care, or a parent dropping the child off with a relative and not returning. CFSA also may ask a relative to take the child informally because CFSA decided it is not safe for the child to remain with the parent(s). Anyone who takes informal custody of a child should try to make sure the parent has agreed, and if possible, get that agreement in writing in case there are any questions later.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of Informal Custody?
The pros of informal custody are that it is a quick and easy way to protect a child. For example, if a child is in immediate danger or has nowhere else to go, taking informal custody may be the only option until you can find help for the child or try to get another form of custody. Informal custody also does not require a court order or involve other people in the child’s life.
However, informal custody is risky because it provides no legal rights for the relative caregiver to take care of the child, like getting medical care for the child, except in an emergency. A relative caregiver with informal custody also may have trouble registering the child for school (including getting required immunizations), getting certain governmental benefits (see Part III of this Guide), adding the child to his or her lease, obtaining a housing voucher, or applying for a larger public/subsidized housing unit. And, if the relative caregiver does not have the child’s birth certificate or Medicaid card, he or she may need a court order to obtain those. Also, the parent(s) can take the child back at any time, even if they agreed that the child should stay with the relative caregiver or the relative caregiver thinks it would be unsafe for the child to return home. For all these reasons, informal custody is not usually a good custody solution.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

For more information about informal custody, contact a local legal services provider or family law attorney (see Appendix C).
B. Custodial Power of Attorney

1. What is a Custodial Power of Attorney?

A Custodial Power of Attorney is a written agreement between the parent(s) and relative caregiver that generally grants temporary and limited custody of a child, which can include the following rights and responsibilities:

► Physical custody;
► Control of the child;
► Responsibility for the child’s care;
► The right to enroll the child in school, get information from the school, and make decisions about school-related matters; and
► The right to get medical care for the child, as well as get information and make decisions about the child’s medical care.

2. Who Can Get a Custodial Power of Attorney?

Anyone can get a Custodial Power of Attorney if the child’s parent(s) agree to sign one. The parent(s) get to decide what rights they want to give and for how long. The parent(s) may want to do this if they need someone to care for the child temporarily, but do not want to have to go to court to make the arrangement legally valid. The parent(s) can revoke the Custodial Power of Attorney at any time.

3. How to Get a Custodial Power of Attorney?

We recommend using the sample Custodial Power of Attorney at the end of this Guide (see p. 60), or getting a copy at the Family Court Self-Help Center or online at: childrenslawcenter.org/resource/custodial-power-attorney-and-revocation. A Custodial Power of Attorney interactive interview is available at lawhelpinteractive.org/Interview/GenerateInterview/6213/engine. Parent(s) can also write and sign their own agreement, but it should include the following information:

► The rights and responsibilities granted with respect to the child;
► The length of time the Custodial Power of Attorney will be in place (this can be for any length of time);
► How the parent can revoke the Custodial Power of Attorney;
► Any other important information about the care of the child; and
► The parent(s) signature showing their agreement.

The Custodial Power of Attorney does not need to be notarized, but it is recommended. It is also not filed with any court.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of a Custodial Power of Attorney?

One advantage of a Custodial Power of Attorney is that it is a legally valid document that gives a relative caregiver the authority to care for the child, which can include getting important services for the child like medical care. It also may be accepted as proof the child is living with the relative for adding the child to a lease or applying for a larger public/subsidized housing unit. Having a legally valid, written document can be helpful if there is ever any question about who should be caring for the child. Another advantage of a Custodial Power of Attorney is that it can be simple to create, there is no court involvement, and it can be changed or revoked at any time.

A possible downside of a Custodial Power of Attorney is that some providers of services and benefits may not accept a Custodial Power of Attorney and will require a court custody order (see Part III of this Guide). Some housing providers will not accept a Custodial Power of Attorney, and will require a court order to add a child to the lease, obtain a housing voucher, or apply for a larger public/subsidized housing unit. A Custodial Power of Attorney also does not provide long-term safety and stability for the child since it can be revoked at any time.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

Go to the Family Court Self-Help Center located at the JM level of the D.C. Superior Court or contact a local legal services organization or family law attorney for more information (see Appendix C).
C. Custody Ordered by a Court

1. What is Custody Ordered by a Court?

Physical and legal custody ordered by a court grants important rights with respect to caring for a child. Physical custody means where the child lives. Legal custody means who can make decisions for the child and get records and information about the child. Sole custody generally grants a relative caregiver the same rights as a parent. Sole physical custody of a child means that the child lives only with the relative caregiver. Sole legal custody means only the relative caregiver has the right to get school and medical records, talk to doctors and teachers, and make decisions about the child. Joint physical and/or legal custody means the parent and relative caregiver share physical and/or legal custody, but it does not have to be equal. The court can grant any combination of sole or joint custody. For example, the court can grant: (a) sole legal and physical custody of the child to the relative caregiver, (b) sole physical custody of the child to the relative caregiver but joint legal custody to both the relative caregiver and parent(s), or (c) joint physical and legal custody to the relative caregiver and parent(s).

2. Who Can Request Custody From a D.C. Court?

Generally, a custody case can be filed in D.C. if it is the “home state” of the child. “Home state” means that the child or children lived in D.C. with a parent or person acting as a parent for at least six months in a row right before filing the case. If the child is less than six months old, D.C. is the home state if the child lived here since birth. D.C. is also the home state if the child now lives in a different state, but (a) the child has lived there for less than six months, (b) the child lived in D.C. for six months in a row before the child moved away, and (c) a parent still lives in D.C. If D.C. is not the child’s home state, you may still be able to file for custody in D.C. but check with the Family Court Self-Help Center or a lawyer for assistance.

A relative caregiver may file for custody of the child in D.C. court if one of the following three things is true:

- The parent who was caring for the child the most during the past three years agrees to the relative caregiver filing for custody;
- The relative caregiver has been living with and caring for the child for four of the most recent six months; or
- The child is currently living with the relative caregiver, and custody with the relative caregiver will prevent harm to the child.

The court will start with the idea that it is always best for a child to live with his or her parent(s) UNLESS it can be shown that:

- The parent(s) agree to the relative caregiver having custody;
- The parent(s) have abandoned the child or cannot or will not take care of the child; or
- Staying with the parent(s) will hurt the child physically or emotionally.

Even if these things are proved, the judge will only grant custody to a relative caregiver if he or she determines it would be best for the child. The judge will consider the following:

- How the child gets along with the relative caregiver, his or her parents, and siblings;
- Who has been caring for the child;
► What custody decision will be best for the child’s physical and emotional needs; and
► The wishes of the child.

3. How to Request Custody From a Court?

A complaint or motion for custody can be filed at the Family Court Central Intake Center located on the JM level of the D.C. Superior Court, 500 Indiana Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. 20001. Form complaints and motions and help with filling them out are available at the Family Court Self-Help Center, located in Room JM-570 of the D.C. Superior Court, or online at dccourts.gov/services/forms. The Center is open every weekday from 8:00 am until 5:30 pm, with no new intakes accepted after 5:00 pm.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of Custody Ordered by a Court?

Custody ordered by a court can provide the most rights of all of the options discussed in this Guide because it grants the right to care for the child and make decisions about the child. The order is legally enforceable, which means everyone must follow what the order says about who has the right to care for and make decisions about the child. Legal custody permits the relative caregiver to get medical care for the child, obtain the child’s medical records, and talk with medical professionals about the child’s care. There are also certain public benefits that are only available to a relative caregiver who has legal and/or physical custody ordered by a court (or by a Custodial Power of Attorney) (see Part III of this Guide). Many housing providers require a court order to add a child to the lease, obtain a housing voucher, or apply for a larger public/subsidized housing unit. Also, unless the parent gets the court to change the order, he or she cannot simply come pick up the child, so this provides safety and stability for the child.

The possible downsides of custody ordered by a court are that you have to go to court to get an order, and there may be a number of hearings or a trial before custody is granted. If the parent(s) do not agree to the custody arrangement, a court proceeding may result in bad feelings between the parties. In addition, until the child turns 18, a parent can ask the court to change the order. Finally, even if everyone agrees together to change the court-ordered custody arrangement, the change would not be legal unless the court orders it.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

Go to the Family Court Self-Help Center to get sample legal forms for filing custody and help with completing them, or go online for copies of these forms at dccourts.gov/services/forms. More information is also available at lawhelp.org/dc/resource/pro-se-family-law-pleadings-for-individuals-w and from the Handbook for People Who Represent Themselves in Divorce, Custody, and Child Support Cases at lawhelp.org/files/7C92C43F-9283-A7E0-5931-E57134E903FB/attachments/B59386E1-BCFD-4AE8-99A6-8C4F08342AAD/dr-handbook-for-self-represented-parties.pdf. Call the D.C. Bar Legal Information Helpline at (202) 626-3499 to listen to prerecorded messages about custody issues, or contact a local legal services organization or family law attorney for help (see Appendix C).
D. Foster Care

1. What is Foster Care?

If CFSA finds that a child has been abused or neglected or is in immediate danger of abuse or neglect, it may take the child out of his or her birth family home and place the child in a safe setting, which is called foster care. Children in foster care may be placed with foster parents, in group homes, or in other safe places identified by CFSA. CFSA is responsible for the child when he or she is in foster care.

Abuse includes the following four categories:
► Putting a child in a dangerous situation;
► Hurting a child on purpose;
► Sexual exploitation or contact with a child; or ► Mental or emotional harm to a child.

Neglect means not giving a child enough food, shelter, supervision, education, or medical care. By itself, lack of money is not child neglect.

Anyone who thinks a child has been abused or neglected can call CFSA’s 24-hour hotline at (202) 671-SAFE and the caller’s identity will be kept confidential. If CFSA decides to remove a child from a home due to abuse or neglect, the agency will file an action in the D.C. Family Court within 72 hours to get approval of the decision. If approved, the child will be placed in a foster home, which may be the home of a relative caregiver if the relative caregiver has or receives a foster parent license, as discussed below.
Most foster care arrangements are temporary, as the child is normally reunified with his or her parent(s). A court case is opened for the child called a neglect case, and the judge will determine whether or not it is safe for the child to go back home to live with his or her parents, or if it is not safe, then the court would consider adoption or guardianship of the foster child.

2. Who Can Become a Foster Parent?

To become a foster parent for a D.C. child, a person must generally meet the licensing requirements set forth below (Note: A relative caregiver who lives in D.C. may ask CFSA to waive any of these requirements that do not affect the child’s safety):

► Be at least 21 years old;
► Live in D.C. or Maryland;
► Provide character references;
► Be able to support the household financially;
► Have enough space in the home or apartment for the child to sleep separately from adults and from opposite-sex children over the age of five;
► Have the time and ability to provide good care, guidance, and support to the child;
► Be in good physical and mental health and free of contagious diseases (this applies to all people living in the home); and ► Ensure the home meets certain other health, safety, and sanitary requirements.
In addition, neither the foster parent nor anyone 18 or older living in the home can:

- Be identified as a child abuser/neglecter in a neglect case; or
- Have a felony conviction for certain offenses, including domestic violence and child abuse and neglect.

3. How to Become a Foster Parent?

If CFSA believes the child is not safe to remain in his or her home, CFSA may ask a relative caregiver to care for the child. CFSA can grant a relative caregiver who lives in D.C. a temporary foster parent license, which allows the relative caregiver to take custody of the child right away. The temporary license lasts for 150 days, with the possibility of one renewal for an additional 90 days, while awaiting approval of a permanent annual license. CFSA may ask the relative caregiver to take care of the child informally rather than become a foster parent, or tell the relative caregiver to file for custody in court instead.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of Becoming a Foster Parent?

Becoming a foster parent can have many advantages. First, similar to sole custody, a relative caregiver will have a legal order from a court that grants him or her the right to care for the child. The child’s parent(s) cannot come get the child at any time, and they must meet certain requirements before they can be reunified with the child. This allows the child to live in a safe and stable home while his or her parent(s) try to fix the issues in their home so the child can be safely returned. CFSA has ultimate responsibility for children in foster care, but foster parents have certain rights regarding the child, like the right to get health care and education for the child. Another advantage of becoming a foster parent is CFSA pays the foster parent a set monthly amount to help care for the child (called a foster care subsidy), which helps pay for the child’s food, home, clothing, and other needs (See Section III.J. of this Guide for information on the foster care subsidy). Foster parents also have priority consideration if a foster child becomes available for adoption or guardianship.

There are also possible downsides to being a foster parent. First, it takes a lot of time and energy. There are court hearings every few months, and a social worker from CFSA will stay involved with the child and make regular visits to the foster parent home. The foster parent license must be renewed each year and the home must continue to meet all of the applicable licensing requirements. Second, CFSA and the court may require the foster parent or the child to do things that the foster parent may not agree with, like allowing the child visitation with the parent(s) or returning the child to live with the parent(s). In addition, even if the foster parent and the biological parent(s) believe the child is safe to return home, this cannot happen unless the court agrees.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

CFSA can provide information about the foster care process and answer questions about becoming a foster parent, or go online at fosterdckids.org to get answers to questions. The D.C. Foster and Adoptive Parent Advocacy Center is also a good resource for foster parents (see Appendix B). The D.C. Family Court Counsel for Child Abuse and Neglect can provide information and lawyers for foster parents.
E. Permanent Guardianship

1. What is Permanent Guardianship?

Similar to foster care, permanent guardianship is for children who have been taken out of their birth family homes because CFSA has found that they have been abused or neglected or are in immediate danger of abuse or neglect. Permanent guardianship is different from foster care because it is supposed to be a permanent option for children and CFSA does not stay involved with the family. Permanent guardianship grants a caregiver long-term physical and legal custody of the child. Parents still have certain rights, like agreeing to the child’s adoption and determining the child’s religion, and they may be granted visitation with the child.

2. Who Can Become a Permanent Guardian?

A relative caregiver may become a permanent guardian for a child who has been taken out of his or her home by CFSA. Usually the proposed permanent guardian is a relative or close family friend, or someone currently caring for the child, who has been licensed as a foster parent.

3. How to Become a Permanent Guardian?

A relative caregiver may file a motion for permanent guardianship any time after the neglect case is filed. The motion must include information about the child, the proposed guardian, and the parents, and why permanent guardianship, rather than adoption or return to the parent, is in the child’s best interests. The court can only grant permanent guardianship to someone the child has been living with for at least six months, and the court must look at several factors to determine that it is in the best interests of the child, that adoption or return to the parent is not right for the child, and that the proposed permanent guardian can provide a safe and permanent home for the child.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of Becoming a Permanent Guardian?

Becoming a permanent guardian can have many advantages. First, similar to sole custody, a relative caregiver will have a legal order from a court that grants him or her the right to care for and make decisions about the child. And, once the permanent guardianship is granted, the neglect case is closed and CFSA is no longer involved with the family. Permanent guardians licensed as foster parents can also receive a guardianship subsidy to help care for the child. (See Section III.K of this Guide for information on the permanent guardianship subsidy). It is also a good option when the relative caregiver does not want to adopt the child and end the parent’s rights altogether.

There are also possible downsides to being a permanent guardian. First, the relative caregiver will need to go to court and convince the judge that he or she should be granted permanent guardianship of the child. In addition, the guardianship order can be changed or ended if a parent files a motion and the judge determines that there has been a major change in circumstances and it is best for the child.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

CFSA can provide information about the guardianship process and answer questions about becoming a permanent guardian. The D.C. Family Court Counsel for Child Abuse and Neglect can provide information and lawyers to proposed permanent guardians.
F. Standby Guardianship

1. What is Standby Guardianship?

Under D.C. law, a custodial parent (which for this purpose means a custodial parent or other person who has physical custody and legal rights to the child ordered by a court) can authorize a third party (a person other than a parent) to take care of and make decisions for the child if the parent becomes incapable of doing so due to death, illness, or an adverse immigration action such as detention or deportation (a “triggering event”). In other words, the parent can name a standby guardian to care for the child in case he or she is unable to do so in the future. Until that time comes, the parent will continue to care for the child and keep all of his or her rights to raise the child and make decisions for the child’s care.

2. Who Can Become a Standby Guardian?

Anyone can become a standby guardian if the custodial parent names that person in writing as the standby guardian, and the court approves the appointment of the standby guardian by determining it is in the best interests of the child.

3. How to Become a Standby Guardian?

A custodial parent can name someone as the standby guardian, usually a relative or trusted friend, in a written document called a “designation.” The designation does not have to be filed with the court initially, but it must be signed by the custodial parent, the proposed standby guardian, and two witnesses. The standby guardian’s responsibility to care for the child starts when there is a “triggering event,” which means: (a) the parent states in writing that he or she cannot currently care for the child and agrees for the standby guardian to do so; (b) the parent is determined incapable to care for the child by a health care provider; (c) the parent dies; or (d) the parent is subject to an adverse immigration action, such as detention or deportation. Within 90 days after the triggering event, the parent or standby guardian must file a petition with the court to approve the standby guardian, or the guardianship with automatically terminate. The petition must be served on anyone with legal rights to the child. The court will then determine whether it is in the best interests of the child to approve the appointment of standby guardian and grant him or her custody of the child.

4. What are the Pros and Cons of Becoming a Standby Guardian?

The main advantage to a custodial parent of designating a standby guardian is that it gives that parent the power to control what happens to the child after his or her death, incapacity, or inability to care for the child because of an adverse immigration action. The main advantage of being designated as the standby guardian is that it results in a court order granting custody of the child to the standby guardian, which is required for a third party to obtain a child’s original birth certificate, to apply for a passport for a child, and to obtain certain types of benefits. Further, a court order will usually be honored in other states. A standby guardian designation also can be beneficial because it states the wishes of the custodial parent, thereby allowing for an easier transition of custody and reducing confusion if multiple caregivers step forward to care for the child.

A possible downside of standby guardianship is that, within 90 days of the triggering event, a petition must be filed in court to continue the standby guardian’s legal authority. Further, if there is a surviving non-custodial parent whose rights have not been legally terminated or given up, there may be a contested custody hearing.

5. Who to Contact for More Information?

Go to the Family Court Self-Help Center located on the JM level of the D.C. Superior Court for sample forms and help completing them, or contact a local legal services organization or family law attorney for more information (see Appendix C). A sample standby guardian designation and sample petitions are available online at lawhelp.org/dc/resource/pro-se-family-law-pleadings-for-individuals-w.
Relative caregivers may be eligible for help from the D.C. and/or federal government, even if they were not eligible before becoming a relative caregiver. Some of these programs are described below. A local legal services organization, family law attorney, CFSA, or the agency that is in charge of the program can provide more information about these services (see Appendices for contact information).

Please note there are different requirements for immigrants to be eligible for some of these benefits. In general, undocumented immigrants are not eligible to receive TANF, SNAP, Medicaid, or SSI. Lawful permanent residents, and certain other categories of immigrants (e.g., refugees, asylum seekers, and victims of human trafficking or domestic violence) may be eligible after a waiting period. A child’s eligibility for benefits is not affected by the parent’s or relative caregiver’s immigration status, so a child may be eligible even if the parent or caregiver is not. Undocumented immigrants may be eligible for certain D.C. subsidized benefits, as well as emergency assistance, including WIC, emergency Medicaid, and treatment in hospital emergency rooms. For more information on immigrant eligibility for benefits, please contact the applicable government or community service provider or an immigration attorney.
A. Temporary Cash Assistance for Needy Families (TANF)

1. What is TANF?

The TANF program provides financial assistance to needy families with dependent children. See Appendix A-1 for the 2020 income limits for eligibility and the TANF grant amounts. The program also helps you find employment through job training, job readiness, child care, tuition assistance, case management, and other services. You will be required to participate in work, education, or training services unless you get an exemption.

2. Who Can Get TANF?

To be eligible for the D.C. TANF program, you must be a D.C. resident and:

► Be responsible for a child under 18, or under 19 who is enrolled in a full-time secondary school (or similar vocational or technical program);

► Be a U.S. national, citizen, legal alien, or permanent resident (or certain other immigrant, such as refugee, victim of human trafficking, or domestic violence victim);

► Have low-income well below the Federal Poverty Level (see Appendix A-1);

► Meet asset limits of $2,000 ($3,000 if person 60 or older or disabled lives in household); and

► Be under-employed, unemployed, or about to become unemployed.
TANF is only available to parents and relatives raising a child (relatives must prove they are related). Unrelated caregivers can apply for the General Assistance Program for Children on the same application. A court order or Custodial Power of Attorney is not required to receive TANF or General Assistance, but proof that the child lives with you must be provided.

3. How to Apply for TANF?

A relative caregiver can apply for TANF for the entire household, or just for the child. If applying only for the child, the TANF amount will be less, but the relative caregiver’s income and assets will not be counted in determining eligibility and the TANF work requirements are waived. To apply for TANF, fill out an application and submit it by mail or in person to a D.C. Economic Security Administration Service Center. A list of Centers is available in Appendix A-1 to this Guide, or find a Center at dhs.dc.gov/node/117522. Combined Applications for TANF, food stamps (SNAP), and Medicaid/D.C. Healthy Families can be obtained at a Center, or online at dhs.dc.gov/node/117542. After submitting the application, an interview will be scheduled. The chart at Appendix A-1 lists the documents to bring to an interview. Applying for TANF requires the applicant to sign over any rights to get child support from the parent(s) to the D.C. government. The D.C. government is required to process a completed TANF application within 45 days of receipt.
B. Food Stamps (SNAP)

1. What are Food Stamps?

D.C. offers food stamps through its Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (“SNAP”) that helps low-income families buy food for their household, including any children in their care.

2. Who Can Get Food Stamps?

SNAP has specific requirements and limits for receiving food stamps. Whether a household can receive food stamps and the amount depends on a number of factors. A household generally means parents, relative caregivers and children, as well as others living in the household who prepare food together. In general, if all members of the household receive TANF, SSI, or in some circumstances General Assistance, the household will automatically be eligible for SNAP benefits. Otherwise, the household must meet certain gross and net income limits, as well as an asset test (limit of up to $2,250 in countable resources such as cash or money in the bank), to be eligible for SNAP. Households with an elderly or disabled person must have assets less than $3,500 but do not need to meet the gross income limit, and will not need to meet the net income limit if their income is below the gross income limit. The amount of SNAP benefit is determined by multiplying the household’s net monthly income by 0.3 and subtracting that from the maximum monthly allotment for the household size. An explanation of the SNAP requirements, limits, and allotment amounts can be found at Appendix A-1, or on the D.C. Department of Human Services website at dhs.dc.gov/service/snap-eligibility. A court order or other form of legal custody is not required to get SNAP assistance, but proof that the child lives in the household is required.
3. How to Apply for Food Stamps?

To apply for SNAP, fill out an application (dhs.dc.gov/node/117542) and submit it by mail or in person to a D.C. Economic Security Administration Service Center. A list of Centers is available at Appendix A-1, or find a Center at dhs.dc.gov/node/117522. Obtain a combined application for TANF, SNAP, and Medicaid at a Center or online at dhs.dc.gov/node/117542. After submitting the application, an interview will be scheduled. See the chart at Appendix A-1 for the types of documents to bring to the interview. SNAP applications must be processed within 30 days of submitting a complete application. To qualify for expedited SNAP within 7 days, a household must have less than $100 in assets and make less than $150 a month in income, or the household monthly rent/mortgage and utilities must be more than household gross income.

C. Medical Assistance in D.C.

1. What Types of Medical Assistance Does D.C. Provide?

D.C. Healthy Families is a health insurance program for D.C. residents who are U.S. citizens or eligible immigrants, and meet income and/or asset requirements. D.C. also operates the D.C. Health Care Alliance, a managed health care plan that does not have citizenship requirements and provides medical assistance to D.C. residents with low-income and limited assets who are not eligible for Medicare, Medicaid, or other health insurance. D.C. further runs the Immigrant Children’s Program for individuals under age 21 who are not eligible for Medicaid. These programs generally cover doctor visits, hospital care, prescription drugs, child early intervention services, and many other services at little or no cost.

2. Who Can Get D.C. Medical Assistance?

If you receive TANF, you will automatically be eligible for D.C. Medical Assistance. Otherwise, to be eligible for D.C. Healthy Families, you must be a resident of D.C, a U.S. citizen or an eligible immigrant, and meet one of the following income limits based on the Federal Poverty Level (FPL) (see aspe.hhs.gov/poverty-guidelines) and asset limits (if applicable):

- Children (age 0–18) — income 319% FPL
- Youth (age 19–20) — income 216% FPL
- Pregnant Women — income 319% FPL
- Elderly (65 or over), Blind, or Disabled — income 100% FPL and assets less than $4,000
- Adults (age 21–64) — income 210% FPL

There are no income or asset limits for certain people, such as Supplemental Security Income (SSI) recipients, foster care or former foster care subsidy recipients, and Medicare savings program recipients. See dhcf.dc.gov/service/dc-healthy-families for more information on eligibility.

To be eligible for D.C. Health Care Alliance, you must be a D.C. resident and meet the following requirements:

- age 21 or older;
- have a household income at or below 200% of the FPL;
- have assets below $4,000 for one person and $6,000 for couples or families; and
- not have other health insurance and not be eligible for Medicare or Medicaid.
To be eligible for the Immigrant Children’s Program, you must be a D.C. resident and meet the following requirements:
► under age 21;
► not be eligible for Medicaid; and
► have income at or below 200% of FPL (there is no asset test).

In general, a custody order or Custodial Power of Attorney granting custody of the child is not required to get Medical Assistance, but you must show that the child lives in the household and that you have the right to obtain Medical Assistance for the child.

3. How to Apply for D.C. Medical Assistance?

If applying for D.C. Healthy Families and you are not 65 or older, blind, or disabled, you must complete the DC Health Link Application for Health Coverage. Applications are available at any D.C. Health Link Enrollment Center (see dchealthlink.com/enrollmentcenters or Appendix A-2 for locations), a D.C. Economic Security Administration Service Center (see Appendix A-1 for locations), or online at dchealthlink.com/individuals/medicaid. Apply by mail or in person to a D.C. Health Link Enrollment Center. Call the D.C. Health Link Customer Service Center toll-free at (855) 532-5465 for help with the application.

If applying for D.C. Healthy Families and you are 65 or older, blind or disabled, or you are applying for D.C. Health Care Alliance, you must complete a combined application for TANF, SNAP, and Medicaid/D.C. Healthy Families (dhs.dc.gov/node/117542). You can submit the D.C. Healthy Families application in person or by mail. If applying for D.C. Health Care Alliance, you must come in person to a D.C. Economic Security Administration Service Center (see list of Center locations at Appendix A-1 or online at dhs.dc.gov/node/117542).

D. WIC

1. What is WIC?

The Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) provides nutrient-rich foods, nutrition counseling and education, breast-feeding support, health care assessment and screening, and referrals to health and social service providers.

2. Who Can Get D.C. WIC benefits?

D.C. WIC benefits are available for pregnant or breast-feeding women, new mothers, infants, and children up to the age of five. A WIC recipient must live in D.C., have a nutritional or medical risk as determined by a nutritionist or other health professional, and either meet the income guidelines (income cannot be more than 185% of the Federal Poverty Level aspe.hhs.gov/poverty-guidelines) or be a participant in Medicaid, TANF, or SNAP.

3. How to Apply for D.C. WIC?

To apply for D.C. WIC, call (800) 345-1942. You will be asked a few eligibility questions. If eligible, schedule an appointment at any WIC clinic (see Appendix A-3 for clinic locations or online at dchealth.dc.gov/service/special-supplemental-nutrition-program-women-infants-and-children-wic). On the day of the appointment, plan to spend about an hour at the clinic and bring the following information:

- Proof of D.C. residence (a bill or letter addressed to home address in the past 30 days);
- Proof of total family income (last two check stubs or Medicaid, D.C. Healthy Families, School Lunch Program, TANF, or SNAP notice);
- Proof of pregnancy or proof of birth (birth certificate or discharge papers);
- Child’s shot record;
- Child (all children who are eligible, ages 1–5); and
- Referral from a health care provider.

E. SSI for Children

1. What is SSI for Children?

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) for Children is a federal program that provides cash assistance to children who are disabled or blind.

2. Who Can Get SSI for Children Benefits?

To qualify as a child for purposes of SSI, he or she must be either: (a) under age 18 and neither married nor the head of the household; or (b) under age 22 and regularly attending school. A child must be blind or disabled to be eligible. The household also must meet income limits or be receiving TANF. To determine a child’s eligibility for SSI, fill out the short questionnaire online at ssabest.benefits.gov.
3. How to Apply for SSI for Children Benefits?

To apply for SSI for Children benefits, complete an Application for Supplemental Security Income and a Child Disability Report. A Child Disability Starter Kit is available online at ssa.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits_child_eng.htm, and the Child Disability Report is also available online at ssa.gov/childdisabilityreport/. To complete the application, call (800) 772-1213 or visit a local Social Security Office to set up an interview (see Appendix A-4 for a list of local offices or find the list online at secure.ssa.gov/ICON/main.jsp). At the interview, you will need to provide names and contact information for the child’s doctor(s), names of any medications the child takes, an original copy of the child’s birth certificate, the child’s IEPs or IFSPs, and the child’s medical assistance number, if any. A court order or Custodial Power of Attorney granting a relative caregiver legal custody of the child will usually be required because he or she must sign a form giving the child’s medical providers permission to provide medical information about the child’s disability.

F. Child Care Subsidy Program

1. What is the Child Care Subsidy Program?

The Child Care Subsidy Program helps low-income D.C. families pay for child care for children 6 months to 12 years old. If the child has disabilities, the subsidy may cover child care costs until 19 years old. The subsidy may cover all or part of child care costs, and is paid directly to the child care provider. The amount of the subsidy will depend on the family’s need, financial resources, and size. The child care must be provided by a Licensed Child Care Provider or a Licensed Child Development Home. A Licensed Child Care Provider can be found by contacting D.C. Child Care Connections at (202) 829-2500 or by going online to childcareconnections.osse.dc.gov. If a child care provider cannot be found, another provider may be used if he or she enters into an agreement with the Office of the State Superintendent of Education to maintain certain health, safety, and education requirements.

2. Who Can Get a Child Care Subsidy?

Working families with income at or below 250% of the Federal Poverty Level (aspe.hhs.gov/poverty-guidelines), families receiving TANF who participate in required education and training programs, families getting additional education to improve employment opportunities, teen parents seeking a high school degree or GED, and certain other individuals raising children may be eligible for a child care subsidy. The person applying for the subsidy must be the parent (biological or through a court adoption order) or the legal guardian (via court custody or guardianship order) of the child. A notarized letter from the parent granting custody is not acceptable. The child must be a U.S. citizen or legal resident (information about the parent’s or legal guardian’s citizenship status is not required).

3. How to Apply for a Child Care Subsidy?

To apply for a child care subsidy, complete the OSSE Child Care Subsidy Application, gather the required documentation, and bring them to the D.C. Child Care Service Division in person. (See Appendix A-5 for required documentation, locations and hours). For answers to frequently asked questions, go to osse.dc.gov/childcaresubsidyfaq.
Documentation must show the following (see Appendix A-5 for acceptable documentation):
► identity;
► citizenship or legal status of the child;
► income;
► need for child care;
► DC residency;
► relationship to the child; and
► up-to-date immunizations for the child.

G. D.C. Public School Free or Reduced-Price Meal Program

1. What is the D.C. Public School Free or Reduced-Price Meal Program?

DC Public Schools (DCPS) provides free breakfast to all students, as well as free snacks and a light dinner to students attending after-school programs. DCPS students can also buy school lunch or get free or reduced cost lunch if certain financial eligibility requirements are met (see dcps.dc.gov/farm for more information). D.C. also has a Free Summer Meals Program that provides free nutritious meals and snacks to children 18 years old and younger in low-income areas during the summer months when they are out of school (see osse.dc.gov/dcsummermeals for more information).
2. Who Can Get the D.C. Public School Free or Reduced-Price Meal Program?

All DCPS students can get free breakfast and, if they participate in an after-school program, they can get free snacks and a light dinner. All students can also pay for lunch. A student can get a free or reduced-price lunch if he or she is a D.C. resident, the student’s household receives TANF or SNAP, or the household income meets the Federal Income Eligibility Guidelines (see fns.usda.gov/school-meals/income-eligibility-guidelines).

3. How to Apply for the D.C. Public School Free or Reduced-Price Meal Program?

There is no application for free breakfast or after-school snacks or dinner. To apply for a free or reduced-price lunch, fill out the Free and Reduced-Price Meal (FARM) Application, which is sent home at the beginning of each school year. Otherwise, pick up an application at the school, complete the application online at heartlandapps.com/Terms.aspx?host=dcps.heartlandapps.com&apply=1, or print and mail or fax it to: The Office of Food & Nutrition Services, Attn: Nadine James, 1200 First St., NE, 9th Floor, Washington, DC 20002; Fax: (202) 727-2512. For questions about FARM, call (202) 299-2159 or email farm.dcps@dc.gov. To find a D.C. Free Summer Meals Location, text “FOOD” to 877-877, call 1-866-3-HUNGRY, or visit fns.usda.gov/summerfoodrocks.
H. Grandparent Caregiver Program

1. What is the Grandparent Caregiver Program and Subsidy?

The Grandparent Caregiver Program is run by CFSA and provides monthly payments to low-income D.C. residents who live with and are raising a grandchild, great-grandchild, great-niece, or great-nephew.

According to CFSA, a full subsidy payment (before offsets for TANF and SSI) is $24.79 per child under 12 and $27.92 per child older than 12. Participants can expect to receive an average daily rate of $19.83 per child or an average 30-day month rate of $594.90 per child, only about half the regular foster care monthly subsidy. More information about the program can be found at cfsa.dc.gov/service/grandparent-program or by calling CFSA at (202) 442-6009. The Grandparent Caregiver Program has annual budget limits. If the annual limit has been reached, applicants will be placed on a waiting list.

2. Who Can Get the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy?

To receive the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy, the relative caregiver must meet the following requirements:

► A grandchild, great grandchild, great niece, and/or great nephew under 18 years old lives in the home;
► The child has lived in the home for the past six months;
► The relative caregiver has been the child’s primary caregiver for the past six months;
► The child’s parent(s) have not lived in the home in the past six months. (This does not apply if the parent gave the relative caregiver standby guardianship, is a minor enrolled in school, or is a minor with a medically verifiable disability that prevents him or her from caring for the child);

► The relative caregiver lives in D.C.;
► The total of all money coming into the household is below 200% of the Federal Poverty Level (see aspe.hhs.gov/poverty-guidelines);
► An application for TANF for the child has been submitted; and
► All adults living in the home have provided the results of national and local criminal background checks and Child Protection Registry checks.

3. How to Apply for the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy?

Before applying for a Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy, first apply for TANF for the child, as that is a requirement to receive the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy. To be considered for the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy, submit an application to CFSA. Request an application by:

► calling CFSA at (202) 442-6009 and asking them to mail an application;
► visiting CFSA at 200 I St., SE, Washington, D.C., 20003 (CFSA strongly recommends calling to set up an appointment before coming into the office); or ► going online: cfsa.dc.gov/sites/default/files/dc/sites/cfsa/publication/attachments/Application_-_Grandparent_Caregiver_Program_Subsidy_%28April_2019_fillable%29_0.pdf.

The relative caregiver will have to prove that he or she is the child’s grandparent, great-grandparent, great-aunt, or great-uncle by providing documentation such as birth certificates, acknowledgements of paternity, court orders, and DNA tests. The relative will also need to show that the total amount of money coming into the household is less than 200% of FPL. Finally, the relative caregiver will have to prove he or she is the child’s primary caregiver in one of these two ways:

(a) Providing a court order granting the relative caregiver custody or standby guardianship or stating the relative caregiver adopted the child; or

(b) Providing any of the following: (i) school records showing that the relative caregiver enrolled the child in school the most recent school year or is the primary educational contact for the child; (ii) immunization or medical records, no more than two years old, showing the relative caregiver is providing for the child’s medical needs; (iii) records showing the relative caregiver received either SSI or TANF for the child for at least the last six months; or (iv) a letter from any legal, medical, military, law enforcement, social service or similar professional, or landlord describing the relative caregiver’s status in caring for the child; and completing the checklist on page two of the application stating why the parents are unable to care for the child.

All adults (18 years old and over) living in the household will be required to come to CFSA for fingerprinting for an FBI check, a local police clearance, and a Child Protection Registry Check. Each adult must fill out the “Child Protection Registry” form, which must be witnessed by a member of CFSA’s staff or notarized.

When the application packet is complete, the next step is to call CFSA at (202) 442-6009 to make an appointment to turn in the application and documents. In most cases, this appointment will be the same day as the fingerprinting appointment.
I. Close Relative Caregiver Program

1. What is the Close Relative Caregiver Program and Subsidy?

The Close Relative Caregiver Program commenced in the Fall of 2019, is run by CFSA, and provides monthly payments to low-income D.C. residents who live with and are raising a niece, nephew, cousin, or sibling.

This is a new program and it is expected that the average payment rate will be commensurate with the Grandparent Caregiver Program Subsidy. See Section II.H.1. More information about the program can be found on the CFSA website at cfsa.dc.gov/service/close-relative-caregiver-program, or by calling CFSA at 1-866-326-5461. The Close Relative Caregiver Program has annual budget limits. If the annual limit has been reached, applicants will be placed on a waiting list.

2. Who Can Get the Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy?

To receive the Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy, the relative caregiver must meet the following requirements:

► A niece, nephew, cousin or sibling under 18 years old lives in the home;

► The child has lived in the home for the past six months;

► The relative caregiver has been the child’s primary caregiver for the past six months;

► The child’s parent(s) have not lived in the home in the past six months. (This does not apply if the parent gave the relative caregiver standby guardianship, is a minor enrolled in school, or is a minor with a medically verifiable disability that prevents him or her from caring for the child);

► The relative caregiver lives in D.C.;

► The total of all money coming into the household is below 200% of the Federal Poverty Level (see aspe.hhs.gov/poverty-guidelines);

► An application for TANF for the child has been submitted; and

► All adults living in the home have provided the results of national and local criminal background checks and Child Protection Registry checks.

3. How to Apply for the Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy?

Before applying for a Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy, first apply for TANF for the child, as that is a requirement to receive the Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy. To be considered for the Close Relative Caregiver Program Subsidy, submit an application to CFSA. Request an application by:

► calling or emailing CFSA at 202-727-4545 or cfsa.kinfirst@dc.gov, and asking them to mail an application;

► visiting CFSA at 200 I Street, SE, Washington, D.C., 20003 (CFSA strongly recommends calling to set up an appointment before coming into the office); or

The relative caregiver will have to prove that he or she is the child’s aunt, uncle, cousin, or sibling by providing documentation such as birth certificates, acknowledgements of paternity, court orders, and DNA tests. The relative will also need to show that the total amount of money coming into the household is less than 200% of FPL. Finally, the relative caregiver will also have to prove he or she is the child’s primary caregiver in one of these two ways:

(a) Providing a court order granting the relative caregiver custody or standby guardianship or stating the relative caregiver adopted the child; or

(b) Providing any of the following: (i) school records showing that the relative caregiver enrolled the child in school the most recent school year or is the primary educational contact for the child; (ii) immunization or medical records, no more than two years old, showing the relative caregiver is providing for the child’s medical needs; (iii) records showing the relative caregiver received either SSI or TANF for the child for at least the last six months; or (iv) a letter from any legal, medical, military, law enforcement, social service or similar professional, or landlord describing the relative caregiver’s status in caring for the child; and completing the checklist on page two of the application stating why the parents are unable to care for the child.

All adults (18 years old and over) living in the household will be required to come to CFSA for fingerprinting for an FBI check, a local police clearance, and a Child Protection Registry Check. Each adult must fill out the “Child Protection Registry” form, which must be witnessed by a member of CFSA’s staff or notarized.

When the application packet is complete, the next step is to call or email CFSA at 202-727-4545 or cfsa.kinfirst@dc.gov to make an appointment to turn in the application and documents. In most cases, this appointment will be the same day as the fingerprinting appointment. Once approved, the relative caregiver will enter into a subsidy agreement with CFSA.
J. Foster Care Subsidy

1. What is a Foster Care Subsidy?

A foster care subsidy is a set amount of money paid on a monthly basis to a licensed foster parent who cares for a foster child, including a relative caregiver licensed as a foster parent, known as a “kinship foster parent.” The amount of the subsidy varies based on the number of foster children in the home, whether they have a disability, and the extent of their needs. Foster care rates in D.C. for 2020 range from $1,140 to $1,995 per child per 30-day month. Foster care rates are calculated and adjusted each year to account for cost of living increases. There is no income eligibility requirement for the foster care subsidy, and other benefits are not deducted from the rate.

2. Who Can Get a Foster Care Subsidy?

Only licensed foster parents can receive a foster care subsidy. The requirements for a relative caregiver to become a licensed foster parent in D.C. are explained in Part II.D. of this Guide, in the section labeled “Foster Care.” If a relative caregiver becomes a licensed foster parent, and has a foster child in the home, he or she will receive the foster care subsidy on a monthly basis.

3. How to Apply for a Foster Care Subsidy?

A foster care subsidy is only available to licensed foster parents. An application must be submitted to CFSA to become a licensed foster parent. Foster parent training is also required to become licensed. Once licensed, the foster parent will enter into a foster care subsidy agreement with CFSA. More information about foster care licensing, the subsidy, and rates is available from CFSA (see Appendix B for contact information).
K. Permanent Guardianship Subsidy

1. What is a Permanent Guardianship Subsidy?

A permanent guardianship subsidy is a monthly cash payment that is usually the same amount as the foster care subsidy. (See Section III.J of this Guide). There is no income eligibility requirement for the permanent guardianship subsidy, and other benefits are not deducted from the rate.

2. Who Can Get a Permanent Guardianship Subsidy?

Only the permanent guardian approved by the court who has been licensed as a foster parent may get the subsidy.

3. How to Apply for a Guardianship Subsidy?

The proposed permanent guardian must apply for the guardianship subsidy on a form provided by CFSA. The proposed guardian and CFSA must enter into a subsidy agreement before entry of the court’s permanent guardianship order. More information about the permanent guardianship subsidy and rates is available from CFSA (see Appendix B for contact information).
L. Child Support

1. What is Child Support?
When a child is in the physical custody of a relative caregiver, both the child’s mother and father generally remain responsible for paying for the child’s basic needs under the law. Whether the parent(s) must pay child support and the amount will be determined by the court.

2. Who Can Get Child Support?
A relative caregiver with physical custody of a child may be eligible to receive child support. The relative caregiver’s income will not be considered in determining how much child support the child’s parent(s) must pay, and the child’s parent(s) may be required to pay child support even if the relative caregiver has enough money to care for the child on his or her own. The Child Support Guideline Calculator (csgc.oag.dc.gov/application/main/intro.aspx) can be used to determine the amount of child support. A relative caregiver must have a court order showing that he or she has physical custody of the child to get child support. Child support is generally not available to foster parents.

3. How to Apply for Child Support?
If a court has ordered that a relative caregiver have physical custody of the child, he or she can ask the court to order the parent(s) to pay child support. The relative caregiver must file a child support case at the Family Court Central Intake Center. The best option may be to ask the D.C. Attorney General’s office to file and handle the case. Information is available at cssd.dc.gov/page/receiving-support, or go to the Child Support Services Division of the Attorney General’s Office located at 441 4th St., NW, Room N550, Washington, DC, between the hours of 8:15am and 4:45pm Monday through Friday (phone: (202) 442-9900). For the D.C. Attorney General to handle the child support case, the following are required:

► Three certified copies of the Custody Order;

► Proof of income like pay stubs, W-2s, or tax returns;

► Proof of D.C. residency, such as a telephone or utility bill;

► Proof of identification like a driver’s license or passport; and

► A one-time $5.00 fee by money order or check to the D.C. Treasurer. NO CASH.
M. Financial Power of Attorney (Statutory Power of Attorney)

1. What is a Financial Power of Attorney?

A Financial Power of Attorney (FPOA) allows someone to name a relative, friend, lawyer, or another trusted person to act as his or her representative with respect to financial matters, such as managing property (like homes and cars) or businesses, managing bank accounts, receiving public benefits, handling taxes, and transferring money to or on behalf of the person.

2. Who Can be Named as a Representative in a Financial Power of Attorney?

A parent can name a relative caregiver as his or her representative in an FPOA. A parent may want to do this when the relative caregiver is caring for the child, and the parent wants to ensure the relative caregiver has the resources to do so.

3. How to Complete a Financial Power of Attorney?

A person can complete the FPOA online at code.dccouncil.us/dc/council/code/sections/21-2101.html. It must be notarized. The Financial Power of Attorney can be revoked at any time, but make sure to notify anyone who received a copy of the FPOA that it has been revoked. For help in completing the FPOA, contact a legal services provider (see Appendix C to this Guide).
